VERDICT DATE SET FOR TWO LEBANESE MEN

The Federal Supreme Court has set 20 January 2020 to issue its verdict in the case of two Lebanese men, including Ahmed Nimr Sobeh, who are appealing their conviction and sentences. The Court has yet to set the date for the appeal hearing of a third Lebanese man, Abdelrahman Talal Chouman. The three men were previously sentenced by the Federal Appeal Court in a trial that did not meet international fair trial standards.

Your Excellency,

On 20 January 2020, the State Security Chamber of the Federal Supreme Court is expected to issue its verdict in the case of two Lebanese men, Ahmed Nimr Sobeh (a sales consultant at Al Nabooda Automobiles), and another Lebanese man, both of whom were sentenced on 15 May 2019 to ten years in prison by the State Security Chamber of the Federal Appeal Court.

The court has yet to set a date for the trial of a third Lebanese man, Abdel Rahman Talal Chouman (a safety and security trainer with Emirates Airlines), who was sentenced to life in prison in the same case. Charges included “forming a terrorist cell” and “planning terrorist attacks in the UAE on orders of Hezbollah”.

The three men’s convictions were based on proceedings that failed to meet international fair trial standards. The court admitted as evidence “confessions” extracted under duress – the defendants were detained incommunicado for months and denied access to lawyers during interrogation and investigation – and they were not given adequate time and facilities to prepare their defence. All three have appealed their conviction and sentences.

In light of the above, and given the fact that we have repeatedly raised similar grave concerns in the past, we call on the Emirati authorities to remind all members of the judiciary of their obligations under international law to ensure that all trials fully comply with international fair trial standards, and to emphasise, in particular, that courts must exclude evidence obtained under torture.

Yours sincerely,

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Between the end of December 2017 and 18 February 2018, State Security forces arrested eight Lebanese men – including Abdelrahman Talal Chouman, a safety and security trainer with Emirates Airlines, and Ahmed Nimr Sobeh, a sales consultant at Al Nabooda Automobiles – on charges including “forming a terrorist cell” and “planning terrorist attacks in the UAE” on orders of Hezbollah, a Shi'a political party and armed group based in Lebanon.

The men were granted short phone calls to their families, during which they told their family members that they were being detained for state security issues but were not able to communicate where they were being held. At least one of the detainees was forced to sign his so-called “confession” without being allowed to read the document.

Their trial started on 13 February 2019. The men were denied access to lawyers during the pre-trial interrogation and investigation phase. Even when lawyers were appointed after the trial began, they were not allowed to meet with them outside of court. The court did not give the lawyers the full documents relating to their clients’ cases, and at least two lawyers withdrew from the case. Following the first trial hearing, some of the family members who had attended the session were allowed to meet with their detained relatives for the first time since their arrest.

On 15 May 2019, the State Security Chamber of the Federal Appeal Court in Abu Dhabi issued its verdict in the case of the eight men, and three others who were tried in absentia – while not present. The verdict session lasted a few minutes, allowing only for the reading of the sentences, and relied on the coerced “confessions” as evidence.

In their absence, Abdel Rahman Talal Chouman and the three men tried received life sentences, and the court ordered all of their communications devices be confiscated, including their computers and phones. Ahmed Nimr Sobeh, a sales consultant at Al Nabooda Automobiles, and another man were sentenced to ten years in prison. Ahmed Nimr Sobeh was also fined 3,000 Emirati Dirhams (around USD$ 817) for possessing a rifle without a licence. The court ordered that they be deported upon completion of their prison terms. The remaining five men were acquitted and later released.
