UYGHUR ACADEMIC JAILED FOR “INCITING EXTREMISM”

Prominent Uyghur historian and publisher, Iminjan Seydin, was convicted of “inciting extremism” after a secret and grossly unfair trial in February 2019. His daughter only learned about his conviction in recent months, through word of mouth. Missing since May 2017, he has been sentenced to 15 years in prison. No evidence against him has been made public.

Dear President,

I write to express my concern for prominent Uyghur historian and publisher, Iminjan Seydin, who has been convicted of “inciting extremism”, in a secret and grossly unfair trial on February 2019, and sentenced to 15 years' imprisonment, deprivation of political rights for five years, and a fine of 500,000 RMB.

His daughter only learned about the trial in November 2019 through a friend in Beijing and phone calls with the Tianshan District People's Court in Urumqi. While no evidence against Iminjan Seydin has been made public, it is believed that his conviction is related to an Arabic rhetoric book he published in 2014.

He was part of a working group on poverty alleviation with the Xinjiang Bureau of Religious Affairs in Hotan when he went missing in May 2017.

I call on you to release Iminjan Seydin immediately and unconditionally, unless there is sufficient credible and admissible evidence that he committed an internationally recognised offence and is granted a fair trial in line with international standards.

Yours sincerely,

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

Iminjan Seydin was a history professor at the Xinjiang Islamic Institute and the founder of Xinjiang Imin Book Publishing Company. Since 2012, he has published over 350 books on topics including: science, psychology, linguistic education and child education. He has dedicated himself to strengthening cultural exchange. Due to his imprisonment, the Xinjiang Islamic Institute has terminated their contract with him. His daughter, Samira Imin, is currently working at Harvard Medical School.

Uyghurs are a mainly Muslim ethnic minority group, concentrated primarily in the Xinjiang Uyghur Autonomous Region (Xinjiang) of China. Since the 1980s, the Uyghurs have been the targets of extensive systematic human rights violations. These include arbitrary detention and imprisonment, incommunicado detention and restrictions on religious freedom, as well as cultural and social rights. Local authorities maintain tight control over religious practice, including prohibiting all government employees and children under the age of 18 from worshiping at mosques. Chinese government policies limit the use of the Uyghur language, impose severe restrictions on freedom of religion and encourage sustained influx of Han migrants into the region.

Media reports have illustrated the extent of new draconian security measures implemented since Chen Quanguo came into power as Xinjiang's Party Secretary in 2016. In October 2016, there were numerous reports that authorities in the region had confiscated Uyghur passports in an attempt to further curtail their freedom of movement. In March 2017, the Xinjiang government enacted the "De-extremification Regulation", which identifies and prohibits a wide range of behaviours labelled as "extremist"; such as "spreading extremist thought", denigrating or refusing to watch public radio and TV programmes, wearing burkas, having an "abnormal" beard, resisting national policies, and publishing, downloading, storing, or reading articles, publications, or audio-visual materials containing "extremist content". The regulation also set up a "responsibility system" for government cadres for "anti-extremism" work and established annual reviews of their performances.

It is estimated that up to a million Uyghurs, Kazakhs and other predominantly Muslim people, have been held in the "transformation-through-education" centres. Chinese authorities denied the existence of these facilities until October 2018, when they began describing them as voluntary, free "vocational training" centres. They claim the objective of this vocational training is to provide people with technical and vocational education, enabling them to find jobs and become "useful" citizens. China's explanation, however, contradicts reports of beatings, food deprivation and solitary confinement, collected from former detainees.

China has rejected calls from the international community, including Amnesty, to allow independent experts unrestricted access to Xinjiang. Instead, China has made efforts to silence criticism by inviting delegations from different countries to visit Xinjiang for carefully orchestrated and closely monitored tours.
