THREE DEATH SENTENCES UPHELD BAHRAIN

The Bahraini High Court of Appeal has upheld the death sentences imposed against three Bahraini men and life sentences against seven others after an unfair trial in relation to the killing of three policemen in March 2014. It also confirmed that eight of the 10 men had their nationality revoked.

On 31 May the High Court of Appeal in Manama, the Bahraini capital, upheld the convictions and death sentences imposed on Ali Abdulshaheed al-Sankis, Sami Mirza Mshaima' and Abbas Jamil Taher Mhammad al-Samea and the sentences to life imprisonment against seven other men. The court also upheld the revocation of the nationality of eight of them. The 10 men had been convicted of charges that included "organizing, running and financing a terrorist group (Al-Ashtar Brigade) with the aim of carrying out terrorist attacks"; "possession and planting of explosives with the intention to kill security forces and causing disorder"; "killing of three police officers and attempted killing of others". The convictions and sentences will now go to the Court of Cassation for confirmation and then to the King for ratification. The 10 men were arrested on 3 March 2014 after their houses were raided by masked security officers. During three weeks of interrogation at the Criminal Investigation Directorate (CID) they did not have access to their families or lawyers and were tortured, according to statements made by some of them. Sami Mshaima' and Abbas al-Samea later told their families that they were given electric shocks, beaten, burnt with cigarettes, deprived of sleep, and sexually assaulted. All 10 men are currently held in Jaw prison, south of Manama.

- Please write immediately in Arabic, English or your own language:
Urging the Bahraini authorities to order a full retrial of the 10 men (please name them) in proceedings that fully comply with international fair trial standards, exclude evidence obtained under torture and do not resort to the death penalty; and to carry out an independent and impartial investigation into their allegations of torture;
- v Acknowledging the authorities' duty to prevent crime and bring those responsible to justice, but insisting that this should always be done in accordance with international law and Bahrain's international human rights obligations;
- v Urging them to commute all death sentences to terms of imprisonment and establish an official moratorium on executions with a view to abolishing the death penalty.

ADDITIONAL INFORMATION

After a bomb blast killed three policemen in the village of al-Daih, west of the capital, Manama, on 3 March 2014, the security forces raided a number of homes and arrested at least 25 people, including the 10 men whose sentences were upheld on 31 May 2016. Many of those who were arrested and later released said they were tortured or otherwise ill-treated

The 10 men's trial began on 30 April 2014 before the High Criminal Court in Manama. On 26 February 2015, all men were convicted; Ali Abdulshaheed al-Sankis, Sami Mirza Mshaima' and Abbas Jamil Taher Mhammad al-Samea were sentenced to death; while Ahmad Jaafar Mhamad 'Ali, 'Ali Jamil Taher Mhamad al-Samea, Taher Youssif Ahmed Mhamad al-Samie, Hussein Ahmad Rashed Khalil, Redha Mirza Mshaima', Hussein Sabah Abdulhussein and Ahmad M'touq Ibrahim were sentenced to life imprisonment. Their lawyers complained that, during the first two hearings, they were not given access to all the evidence available against the defendants, which prevented them from adequately defending their clients. Nor were they allowed to cross-examine the prosecution witnesses. They withdrew from the case in October 2014 in protest. The Ministry of Justice appointed two lawyers from those who had previously withdrawn from the case. They reiterated the same demands made by the lawyers who withdrew in October, which the court again refused.

Abbas Jamil Taher Mhammad al-Samea, a 26-year-old schoolteacher, was arrested at midnight on 3 March 2014. He said he had been in school at the time of the bombing and had presented a letter from the school corroborating this. Following his arrest, he was detained at the Criminal Investigation Department (CID) for 25 days without access to a lawyer and said that he was tortured, including by being beaten, deprived of sleep, denied adequate food and water, burnt with cigarettes, suspended and sexually assaulted, and threatened with death and the revocation of his nationality by interrogators. Following his sentencing, a video was circulated on social media showing Abbas al-Samea' alleging that he had been tortured, leading the Special Investigations Unit (SIU) to probe his allegations. The SIU concluded that Abbas al-Samea' had been injured "as a result of his resistance to the arrest procedure", supporting an earlier examination ordered by the Public Prosecutor's Office (PPO) by a forensic expert. The SIU ruled out the torture claim. The SIU is a body within the PPO set up in 2012 to investigate allegations of torture and other ill-treatment, killings and other violations.

Sami Mirza Mshaima', 41, was arrested at the home of a friend in Hamad Town, south-west of Manama, on 3 March 2014. His mother told Amnesty International that he said that during his detention at the CID he was stripped naked, beaten all over his body, given electric shocks, and raped by having an object inserted in his anus. He said he was so severely beaten on his mouth that he lost his front teeth. See also Amnesty International's April 2015 report Behind the rhetoric, Human rights abuses in Bahrain continue unabated (<https://www.amnesty.org/en/documents/mde11/1396/2015/en/>).

The last execution in Bahrain was that of Bangladeshi national Jassim Abdulmanan in 2010. At least 16 people have since been sentenced to death in Bahrain, although some of the death sentences have since been commuted on appeal. As of today, 140 countries have abolished the death penalty in law or practice. The right to life and the right not to be subjected to torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment are recognized in the Universal Declaration of Human Rights and other international human rights instruments. Amnesty International opposes the death penalty in all cases without exception, regardless of the nature or circumstances of the crime, the guilt, innocence or other characteristics of the offender or the method used by the state to carry out executions. Amnesty International campaigns against the death penalty as a violation of the right to life and the ultimate cruel, inhuman and degrading punishment.
