Freedom
by Langston Hughes

Freedom will not come
Today, this year
Not ever
Through compromise and fear.

I have as much right
As the other fellow has To stand
On my own two feet
And own the land.

I tire so of hearing people say,
Let things take their course.
Tomorrow is another day.
I do not need my freedom when I'm dead.
I can not live on tomorrow's bread.

Freedom
Is a strong seed Planted
In a great need.
I live here, too
I want freedom
Just as you.

The True Prison
by Ken Saro-Wiwa

It is not the leaking roof
Nor the singing mosquitoes
In the damp, wretched cell.
It is not the clank of the key
As the warder locks you in.
It is not the measly rations
Unfit for man or beast
Nor yet the emptiness of day
Dipping into the blankness of night
It is not
It is not
It is not
Lurking in our denigrated souls
It is fear damping trousers
We dare not wash off our urine
It is this
It is this
It is this
Dear friend, turns our free world
Into a dreary prison.

© The True Prison, extracted from A Month and a Day & Letters by Ken Saro-Wiwa, (Ayebia, 2005). Published with the kind permission of Ayebia Clarke Publishing Limited.
If all the world were paper
by Joseph Coelho

If all the world were paper
I would fold up my gran and take her everywhere I go.
I would laminate my baby sister in bubble wrap and lay her to sleep in unbound fairy-tale book pages
and should she get scared:
Rip every fear,
Shred every scream,
Tear every tear.

If all the world were paper
I would re-bind my grandfather, smooth out the dog-ears to all his stories, place his younger days in a zoetrope and flush the harrowing chapters down an ink-gurgling well.

If all the world were paper,
kinds deeds would be post-it notes that stuck to the doer in ever growing tails,
so we would always remember, friends would come with perforated lines so you could keep their best bits with you at all times.

If all the world were paper,
Christmas wrapping foil and birthday cards would follow you to school.

If all the world were paper
dreams would be Braille so we could read them whilst we slept, nightmares would be shopping lists because shopping lists are so easy to forget.

If all the world were paper arguments would rustle before they started and could be put right with a little tape.

If all the world were paper
we could paperclip families together, draw smiles on all the sad faces,
rub out the tears,
cover our homes in Tipex and start all over again.

All the world is not paper but whilst we can imagine it were we can recycle the rough times knowing we will never – ever fold.

© Joseph Coelho (from the anthology Werewolf Club Rules, Frances Lincoln Children’s Books, 2014)
Child Labour
by Paul Lyalls

Where the school bell does not ring no play time for little hands that ache and sting.
Where trainer soles are burned on the spirit of children’s souls.
and mobile phones do not return unanswered calls.
A conveyor belt of Laptops replace a mother’s lap
Can you believe the price of that?
Where the work begins as the sun rises and when the sunsets there are no surprises.
Little hands attaching computer chips is not a childhood moment.
Before you buy, listen carefully to your purchase, does it come with a child’s cry, and is it worth this?

© Paul Lyalls
The Story of a City
by Samih al-Qasim
Translated from the Arabic by Abdullah al-Udhari

A blue city
Dreamt of tourists
Shopping day after day.

A dark city
Hates tourists
Scanning cafés with rifles.

© Samih al-Qasim (Saqi Books 1984)
People Equal
by James Berry

Some people shoot up tall.
Some hardly leave the ground at all
Yet people equal. Equal.

One voice is a non-sugar tomato
Another is sweet mango.
Yet people equal. Equal.

Some people rush to the front.
Other people feel they can’t.
Yet people equal. Equal.

Blow hard on some people they fall.
Hammer others you meet a wall.
Yet people equal. Equal.

One person will sit on a star.
Others never get that far.
Yet people equal. Equal.

Some people never take off with their show.
Others are always on the go.
Yet people equal. Equal.

By permission of the publisher on behalf of the author www.bloodaxebooks.com)