Bahareh Hedayat

JAILED FOR WOMEN'S RIGHTS CAMPAIGNING

Student Bahareh Hedayat was one of hundreds of protesters arrested in 2009 following anti-government demonstration's. Then aged about 29, she was charged with 'insulting the leader' and 'disrupting public order through participating in illegal gatherings'. She is currently serving a 10-year sentence and suffers multiple health complications.

Bahareh was an activist with the Campaign for Equality. Launched in 2006, it is a women's rights initiative committed to ending discrimination against women in Iranian law. The authorities have frequently impeded the campaign's work and repressed its activists by temporarily blocking the main website, denying official permission to hold public meetings and detaining members.
